Barkeria Culture Notes:

Barkeria are Central American orchids that are in the Cattleya Alliance. They are deciduous/ semi-deciduous, meaning that they lose some or all of their leaves each fall/winter. They can look "dead" after they lose their leaves, but they are just dormant. New growths appear during the spring/summer period. They like intermediate temperatures and Cattleya-type (bright) light. It grows best mounted or in a small mesh pot with a small piece of paper to keep the roots need to be exposed, NOT buried in media. NOT overwater. They don't like to be wet for long. They are dormant during their dormant period.

Dendrophylax Little Ghost* (sallei x lindenii)

Picture of plant next slide

This is a cross between Florida's rare endangered ghost orchid (Dendrophylax lindenii) and a similar counterpart from the Dominican Republic (Dendrophylax salei).

This leafless primary hybrid is mounted on cedar & contains approx. 15 plants. It was raised from flask & supplied to us by Thanh Nguyen of Springwater Orchids. This cross is considered easier to grow than the Florida species, but is still very challenging and is intended for experienced growers.

It is by no means easy to bloom and requires special conditions to thrive. Thanh will be happy to share instructions. Fairchild Tropical Botanic Garden has studied and successfully bloomed this hybrid, as have many experienced hobbyist growers.
